An amateur poet, a full-time slacker and a heroin addict, Victor lives in Vienna with his Austrian partner, Annette, and their six-year-old daughter, Pamela. Victor avoids getting any work done by spending his days and sometimes nights out of the house. A return to Victor's native Paris is undertaken with hopes it will solve the family's problems but in fact only makes things worse, as Victor goes away with a junkie with whom he has fallen in love. Annette leaves disappears with Pamela. Eleven years later, the seventeen year old Pamela learns that her father lives nearby and decides to see him again.
