The film is about the emotional trauma of a burial ground caretaker who couldn't digest the death of his native village. It is his protest against the so called development in the name of Special Economic Zone (SEZ) and other lure of urbanization. Rudraswamy is an undertaker in a small village. Devudu is an educated elder who is regarded as a leader of the village. When the Government approaches him to convince the villagers to sell their lands and properties as it is coming up with SEZ, Devudu convinces everybody to sell. But when Rudraswamy realizes that Devudu has erred, things turn around.
